114: In the Round: EU-Russia Relations and Scholarship. Questions or Accusations? Answers or Propaganda? How Can Scholarship Transcend Political Tensions? (non-traditional panel)
Room 3.5
Chair: Heidi Maurer; Participants: Tatiana Romanova, Maxine David, Jocelyn Mawdsley, Natalia Piskunova, Ben Tonra
For a number of reasons, EU-Russia Relations continue to reside at their lowest ebb in the post-Cold War world. This troubled relationship impacts far beyond the Brussels-Moscow arena into the national and regional capitals of the EU’s 28 member states and Russia. Worryingly, anecdotal evidence suggests the impact is being felt within the academy itself, as polarising political views increasingly pressure academics to engage in mild or more serious forms of self-censorship, to take one side or the other or face criticism for being apologists or naïfs. This panel seeks to provide a forum through which difficult questions can be asked and answered, challenges levelled and differences exposed. At the same time, we anticipate finding a good deal of common ground among the many voices to be heard in this relationship. The panel will serve multiple functions, not the least of which are trust-building and problem-solving.

This roundtable forms part of the launch of the UACES Gendering EU Studies Research Network and a provocation to take gender seriously. We ask what is the cost of side-lining gender from European Studies? In what ways do the resulting silences in dominant approaches point to more significant biases in the way the EU operates? How can European Studies overcome these ‘blind spots’ to better understand, for example, the asymmetrical impact of crises on different socio-economic groups?

601: REF 2021: Insights from 2014 and Key Challenges for the Future (non-traditional panel)
Room 3.1
Chair: Simon Usherwood; Participants: Alison Harcourt, Charlie Jeffery, Jonathan Tonge, Susan Hodgett
The roundtable will examine both the insights from the previous REF cycle and the key challenges for the coming assessment. It will feature insights from a range of disciplinary perspectives and from those who have previously served on REF assessments as well as those who are expected to do so in 2021. The roundtable is an opportunity for UACES members to become better acquainted with the REF process and in particular, with changes that have occurred between REF 2014 and today. It will pay particular attention to the ways in which interdisciplinary research will be foregrounded this time around.

617: Democracy Promotion vs Capacity-Building in the Neighbourhood: How to Make Use of Resilience? (non-traditional panel)

Room 3.5
Chair: Elena Korosteleva; Participants: Richard Youngs, Eske van Gils, Tatiana Romanova, Igor Merheim-Eyre, Miriam Lexmann

The roundtable discussion will draw on the current debates revolving around the highly politicised practices of democracy promotion vis-à-vis capacity-building as a new strategic framework to facilitate reform and transformation in the neighbourhood. The roundtable will offer some conceptual and practical insights by way of both: - theorising ‘capacity-building’, ‘democracy promotion’ and ‘regime stability vs regime change’ in the context of ‘resilience-building’, as a new EU security strategy in the neighbourhood, to make local communities more sustainable in their pursuit of ‘good life’; - and applying ‘capacity-building’ and ‘resilience-building’ to practice by way of looking at security implications, EU and Russia’s understandings of resilience for the wider region; regimes’ legitimisation and practical difficulties for major international donors in the region. The roundtable is based on two ongoing and related projects focusing on the concepts of democracy promotion, resilience and capacity-building: GCRF RCUK COMPASS project @Kent; and EU-Russia relations in the context of resilience @St Petersburg State University.

Within the backdrop of the UK’s withdrawal from the EU and Donald Trump’s Presidency, international trade and trade negotiations have gained unprecedented salience. Presenters in this roundtable have all contributed to a new Handbook of EU and Trade Policy (Edward Elgar, 2018, eds. M. Garcia, S. Khorana, J. Orbie) which represents the first comprehensive multidisciplinary text in the field. Presenters will briefly introduce their chapters (on EU legal competences in trade, institutional competences and social contestation) and build on them to offer their perspectives on how the new global trade context is affecting the EU and its trade policy. The aim is to discuss topical issues, present the Handbook, and enable colleagues to gain quick insights into what is happening in EU trade policy to update their courses and classes covering this matter.

Room 3.16

Participants: Bronwyn Winter, Clémence Fourton, Nanda Jarosz

The year 2017 saw the commemoration of three critical landmarks in European history: the Protestant Reformation (1517), the Russian Revolution (1917), and the signature of the Treaty of Rome (1957), which marked a different kind of ‘reformation’ (re-formation): the establishment of the world’s first supranational structure, the European Economic Community, later to become the EU. This book examines these and related historical landmarks and their echoes in subsequent centuries, including the present. It brings together scholars working in European Studies, broadly understood, to consider, through the prism of these and other ‘landmark’ moments, how the twin dynamics of reformation and revolution, and the crises they either addressed or created, have shaped European history and political ideas.

Research Session 9: Wednesday 5 September 2018, 11:30-13:00

901: Democratising Global Governance: The EU’s Role in Promoting Multistakeholderism in External Relations (non-traditional panel)
Room 3.16
Chair: Jamal Shahin; Participants: Diana Potjomkina, Austin Ruckstuhl, Katarzyna Jakimowicz

The European Union has a complex relationship with democracy, and trends in contemporary global governance mirror many of the challenges facing the EU in connecting with citizens and other stakeholders. Whilst moves to enhance engagement and transparency of the workings of international institutions and organisations are apparent in many different policy fields, these developments warrant critical reflection (Scholte; Steffek). In this session, we aim to unpack the EU’s approach to involving different stakeholders in European Union external relations (following legal studies such as Anderson 2010; and ‘grey literature’ such as Ahearne 2008). This panel is organised by members of the GREMLIN Project team.

915: Roundtable: The UK after Brexit and the Challenges of De-Europeanization (non-traditional panel)
Participants: Thomas Horsley, Michael Gordon, Stephanie Reynolds, Harriet Gray, Gregory Messenger, Katy Sowery, Andrew Woodhouse
This roundtable brings together an established group of legal scholars to take stock of current Brexit developments and, moreover, reflect on their collective contribution to an emerging process of ‘De-Europeanization.’ The chosen participants have considerable expertise in (and across) the domestic and international aspects of the Brexit process. They have also previously collaborated as contributing authors to a leading volume on the legal and political challenges linked to the UK’s exit from the EU (see M. Dougan (ed.), The UK after Brexit: Legal and Policy Challenges, Insentia, 2017).
