Message from the Chair

In a year that has posed many challenges for all of us both professionally and personally, it gives me pleasure to be able to report to UACES members that our Association remains ever-vibrant and engaged at the heart of the European Studies community. This is, in no small part, due to the sterling work of our dedicated office staff who have kept the UACES flame very much alive during the current pandemic. So, let me begin this message by saying a very big thank you to Emily Linnemann (our Executive Director), to Emma Marlow (our Events and Membership officer) and to Melina Dieckgräber (our Digital Communications Manager). They adapted quickly and effectively to the challenges posed by the virtual environment and have worked tirelessly so that UACES remains very much open for business.

Despite the uncertainty surrounding Brexit and the Covid pandemic, and its implications for the University sector, the camaraderie and resilience of the UACES community remains very evident. A look back at some of the Association's highlights since our last AGM certainly illustrate this. On the back of the sun-lit 49th Annual Conference in Lisbon our thoughts turned to our 50th Annual Conference celebration which was scheduled to take place in Belfast. Although we were sadly forced to abandon this celebration, our first ever virtual conference proved a great success with 380+ delegates enjoying a range of panels and an excellent plenary on Equality and Inclusion. We do look forward to going back to Belfast in 2023.

We were, sadly, unable to hold our Graduate Conference in Berlin due to the pandemic but the Graduate Forum (GF) remains very active. Since our last AGM, there have been two Doctoral Training Academies, one in Brussels and most recently a virtual event with very pertinent roundtables on mental health in academia and the digitization of academic teaching. The GF committee also launched a series of virtual research sessions soon after the lockdown, which has been an excellent way of keeping our PhD students and Early Career Researchers connected. My thanks to GF Chair Dr Rachael Dickson and the GF Committee for their excellent work. I am very pleased to report that we were notified in August that our Jean Monnet Support to Associations grant application had been successful. This is excellent news as it will help us to support our GF events (as well our Research Networks) for the next three years.

Prior to the lockdown, we held two excellent events as parts of our Brussels speaker series on the themes of Security and the Environment, as well as the inaugural workshop in Leiden of our Erasmus+ Jean Monnet funded project DIMES (Diversity, Inclusion and Multidisciplinarity in European Studies). It is great news that we now have a fully-fledged Equality, Diversity, and Inclusion (EDI) Policy with an EDI officer (Professor Roberta Guerrina) and an EDI working group. My thanks to Dr Katharine Wright for having taken a lead on what is an important landmark for the Association.

We continue to look at ways of diversifying our income streams faced with the various challenges posed by the lockdown and by the financial implications of Open Access in relation to our flagship journal JCMS. With our new website launched, this will include a major membership drive aimed at further internationalising our membership base, increasing the number of practitioner members and introducing an undergraduate membership tier. We continue to maintain a robust, outward profile in a virtual environment, in part due to our Research Networks and our two journals JCMS and JCER. I would, therefore, like to record my appreciation to all our convenors and editors for their work and commitment faced with the current challenges. Finally, my thanks to our outgoing Secretary Dr Maria Garcia for all her support and commitment to UACES in the role.

INTRODUCTION

Despite the uncertainties we face, I am sure that UACES will continue to play a vital role in advancing the study of Europe within the UK, in Europe and globally. I thank you all for your continued support of our unique Association.

Dr Nick Startin, UACES Chair
